

Vacancy:

Dual EM/ICM trainee wanted to join writing group to develop collaborative working framework between EM/ICM (honorary)

Role description:

The Royal College of Emergency Medicine (RCEM) and the Faculty of Intensive Care Medicine (FICM) are developing a national framework to outline best practice collaborative working between emergency medicine and intensive care medicine. We are looking for an enthusiastic dual or joint EM/ICM trainee to be an active participant in a small virtual writing group developing this framework. The writing group is made up of EM and ICM clinicians, guided by a steering group which includes the RCEM and FICM Presidents. We do not expect a need for face-to-face meetings as collaboration between the writing group members will be by email and teleconference, to reduce time and travel burden for authors.

Person specification:

Essential	Desirable
Current dual or joint EM/ICM trainee	Experience of writing local guidance
Excellent written communication skills	Experience of writing national guidance
Working in the NHS

Project purpose:

- To work with key stakeholders to publish a framework for collaborative working between emergency medicine (EM) and intensive care medicine (IM).
- The framework will outline best practice working between EM and ICM.
- The framework is expected to cover the following areas:
 - Staffing and training
 - Equipment
 - Processes

Project timelines:

The project is expected to run from Jan – June 2019, with the framework published at the end of June.

Item	Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	Jun
Steering group meeting
Convene first writing group meeting
Writing
Consultation
Publication

How to apply:

To apply for the position please send a one-page personal statement to Daniel Waeland (dwaeland@ficm.ac.uk) by 9am Monday 11 February.